Mayor Fulop Sponsors Ethics Training Seminar for Directors, Senior Staff, Board Members & Attorneys

JERSEY CITY – The Administration of Mayor Steven M. Fulop today held a mandatory ethics training for department and division directors, as well as senior staff. Board members and attorneys were also invited to attend the seminar, which was held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in City Council Chambers, 280 Grove Street.

“As public officials, we share the sacred trust of public service,” said Mayor Fulop. “Our administration expects all city employees and appointed officials to uphold that trust and we felt this seminar was a great way to educate our employees on the laws pertaining to local government.”

The title of the seminar is “The Quest for Government Integrity” and the presenter, Mr. David Nenko, is a retired staff member from NJ Department of Community Affairs. At the Department of Community Affairs, Mr. Nenko oversaw the implementation of the Local Government Ethics Law and dealt directly with complaints filed with the New Jersey Local Finance Board.

“We intend to hold more of these trainings so that as many Jersey City officials can become educated in local government ethics law as possible,” said Mayor Fulop. “Open, honest, and transparent government is what we have pledged, and this ethics training is an important step in ensuring that our employees are educated and on notice about the penalties for violating these laws.”
